To all General Practitioners and Specialist Consultants

Dear Colleague,

I have been involved in the treatment of infertility for the last 21 years. Initially, I worked with Dr Alan Trounson and Professors Carl Wood and John Leeton at the Queen Victoria Medical Centre in the early 1980's, a time when IVF treatment was in its infancy. I was involved in research into new reproductive techniques and in 1984 reported the world's first successful pregnancy in a woman with absent ovarian function.

Following further postdoctoral research I returned to full time study at Sydney University and was awarded my MBBS in 1994. Training in Obstetrics and Gynaecology followed this and I achieved my FRANZCOG in 2000. Further training and study lead to the Certificate of Reproductive Endocrinology (CREI) in 2002.

I practised as a general Obstetrician & Gynaecologist until 2009, when I ceased obstetric practise to concentrate on infertility treatment.

I currently hold the position of National Medical Director for Monash IVF. This enables me to keep abreast of all the latest advances in reproductive technologies and allows me to apply these to current patient management where appropriate.

While my main rooms remain in Brighton, I have identified a need in Melbourne's north for a dedicated specialist in Reproductive Medicine. I have a real commitment to provide your patients with an efficient and highly successful program for infertility investigation and treatment.

I will be consulting on a regular basis at Epping Medical & Specialist Centre from July 2010 and look forward to assisting you with your management of these couples.

Yours sincerely,

A/Prof. Peter Lutjen
